

Programming Environments / Terminal Cheat Sheet

conda info --envs

get infos about which virtual environments exist conda create -n myenv python=x.xx create a new virtual environment named myenv with python version x.xx conda activate myenv active virtual environment called myenv conda install mypackage install package mypackage via the conda package manager pip install mypackage install package mypackage via the pip package manager conda uninstall mypackage uninstall package mypackage via the conda package manager pip uninstall mypackage uninstall package mypackage via the pip package manager conda list mypackage check whether package mypackage is already installed (and which version) conda deactivate deactivate the current environment (go back to base) conda remove -name myenv --all fully remove virtual environment called myenv conda env create -f myfile.yml create a virtual environment from a file called myfile.yml (which lists the environment specifications)

pwd

"print working directory"

cd path

"change directory" into path

ls

"list files" (in current directory) python --version check whether Python is installed and which version conda --version

check whether conda is installed and which version